THE CHINA MAIL.

HONGKONG, FRIDAY, JAN. 26, 1877.

THE "Chinese Recorder and Missionary Journal" completes its seventh volume by the issue of its Nov.-Dec. number just to hand, and the able editor deserves to be congratulated upon the standing which the magazine has now attained, and upon the number and variety of its contributions. It may be said that in no previous period has so much light been shed by the periodical press upon subjects Chinese as at the present time, and not a little of the credit of this state of things is due to the "Recorder." An interesting article on some of the earlier developments of missionary enterprise, from the pen of one of the few remaining workers who took part therein (Dr S. W. Williams), opens the number now before us and in the reminiscences there given by the learned Doctor there is much that will both please and instruct. The Japan of forty years ago presents a picture which by comparison brings the present condition of that Empire into very marked relief; as witness the sketch of a reception at Napa (Loo-Choo) in July 1837!—

The local authorities tried to keep us on board ship all the time, and did prevent us from going up to the capital Shundi, three miles distant, or extending our walks beyond sight of the sea. I well remember the curious impression produced by the crowd which encircled us on those walks. Men, women, and children ran before and followed us by the hundreds, yielding the way wherever we turned, yet none of them speaking above a whisper, or making a footfall which could be heard. It was like going through the thicket through described by Dante. Peaceable, noiseless, agile, and serious they were, yet most animated and curious—for the opportunity of seeing such a rare sight as a dozen foreigners with a foreign lady too, might never again occur. When we reentered the boat, they lined the ocean beach, noiseless, motionless, and wondering to the last, presenting to our view a base line of dusky skins, a middle stratum of blue rags, and a crust of hair heads, each adorned with two copper hair-pins glancing in the sun, all riveted to the spot as long as our boat could be seen.

Wednesday, February 7.—

5 p.m., Money Order Office closes. Post Office closes except the NIGHT Box, which remains open all night.

Thursday, February 8.—

7 a.m., Post Office opens for sale of Stamps, Registry of Letters, and Posting of all correspondence.

Buddha." This temple is one of the favourite places of pilgrimage for the Mongols professing the Buddhist faith in and about Peking; and the writer gives a graphic and intelligent sketch of the services therein held, as well as of the shrines, images, furniture, and Jamsas to be found within its walls. Most of the remaining pages of the Number are occupied with contributions dealing with the "term question"—concerning which, as a contributor remarks, so much oditum theologicum et philologicum has been excited. These, with the more strictly missionary matter, do not call for special remark, except that we are pleased to observe a cautious but appreciative review of the Rev. Mr. Chalmers' recent book on terms amongst the Notices of recent publications. The severe strictures passed in the China Review upon Canon McClatchie's translation of the Yih-King have called forth a rejoinder from the Rev. Canon. From the news column we observe that the missionaries of Shanghai presented a fare-well address to Dr S. Wells Williams, on the occasion of his final departure to the United States, after a forty-three years' stay in China. An Index to the Volume concludes the Number.

as his Excellency, I would say that what you are taught here is not only to be made use of by you for the purposes of this life, but you should also find in it the means to enable you to die happily and not without hope. I believe that this school, although it is not a religious school, will help you to live honestly and comfortably, and to know something of the life hereafter, and if any one of you in course of time learn something about Christianity he will find himself with what I have said is truth. (Applause).

The Rev. R. H. Kidd said: During the six years of my life in this Colony on not more than one occasion having I missed the opportunity of coming to this annual prize gathering. I hope to go home soon for a time, and I should not like to go away without saying how heartily I sympathise with the work in this school. Dr. Etel has spoken to you from his point of view, and I of course do not forget that I stand up here now as Colonial Chaplain, the head of the ecclesiastical department in this Colony; and I wish to bear my testimony to the value of what is taught here. I believe in the principles which His Excellency the Governor and Dr. Etel have enunciated. I think that a Government School, and this is essentially a Government School, more so than any school in the country from which I came, for this is wholly and entirely supported by Government—under these circumstances, and remembering from whom the Government funds are derived—I think there could be no other system adopted here than that already in vogue, namely, the giving of a simple, secular, education. In England as well as in Hongkong I was and I am now of opinion that this is the way in which to begin the work which has been begun in this school. We as parents can give a religious education to our own children in our own homes; we can give this instruction in our Sunday Schools, which are opened here as well as in every place in England, and then if we are not satisfied with that, there are denominational schools belonging to various sects in the colony. I am quite sure, boys, that you are receiving here such an education as will fit and prepare you for the duties of life. We, now, follow after truth seek after it; do not be satisfied with what you know now. The truth is that for which you must look, and if you do that you will find it, spiritual as well as temporal. The Central School in Hongkong will be and I believe it has been a blessing to the place. I am quite sure that His Excellency will look back with pleasure and comfort on his administration in Hongkong so far as this School is concerned, and when I go home I shall be able to give a good account of educational matters here. I say that in regard to these matters we may thank God and take courage (applause).

Mr. Stewart said they were very much indebted to His Excellency for his kindness in presenting the prizes on that occasion, and for the encouragement he had given to the boys. They were also very grateful to him for the interest and aid he had extended to the school throughout his administration of the Colony. It did them all, both masters and boys, a great deal of good, coming among them on occasions like this, especially after the hard work they had gone through. His Excellency's name and kindness would not be forgotten. His Excellency then announced to the boys that their holidays would commence on that day, and continue until the 1st March. He urged them not to entirely neglect their studies during the period, but to devote a short time each day to them, so that what they had learnt might not be forgotten. He also reminded them that there was no real happiness in absolute idleness, and that they could forget as much in one month as they had learned in six. He hoped they would enjoy their holidays, and return to their studies in health, with happy minds and happy hearts.

SUPREME COURT. IN ORIGINAL JURISDICTION. (Before His Lordship Chief Justice Sir JOHN SMALE.)

26th January, 1877.

Browne & Another v. Alabor & Another, $12,307.92

The following are the special Jurors:—
Messrs A. Newton, H. Hoppius, H. Cope,
H. L. Dalrymple, C. Kahn, T. G. Williamson
and F. D. Sassoon.

Mrs Russell, instructed by Messrs Sharp,
Toller and Johnson, appeared for the plaintiffs.

The Hon. the Acting Attorney General
(Mr. Phillipps), and Mr. Kingsmill, instructed
(Mr. Brereton), appeared for the defendants.

The Attorney General continued his address to the Jury, and commented on the particulars of demand of the counter-claim. He submitted that the amount the defendants fixed as the loss they sustained, was a reasonable one. After further argument, the case was final adjourned till Monday next, when his Lordship will sum up.

Police Intelligence. (Before the Hon. C. May.)

26th January, 1877.

BURGLARY.

The four men charged with having committed a burglary in a house at High Street, Saikang-poo, were again arraigned before the bar. The 1st defendant admitted that he and a man named 2d took committed the robbery and divided the booty. 2d took had carried away a good portion of the property. Of his own portion he had sold some to the 2nd defendant. The 2nd defendant said the 1st defendant did sell to him a jacket and a pair of trousers, but he told him they were his, and he did not know that the things were stolen. The 3rd and 4th defendants simply denied all knowledge of the matter. It was true they were in the house when the 1st defendant brought the things there, but they did not know they were stolen, nor did they have anything to do with it. The 1st defendant was sent to six months' hard labour, and to be three times exposed in the stocks for one hour each time. The 2nd defendant was sent to two months' hard labour for receiving. The 3rd and 4th were ordered to find security in $10 to be of good behaviour for one month.

LARCENY.

Chin Ayow and Chan Amui, boatmen were charged with stealing two bags of rice from the cargo of the S. S. Rajahannanther. The steamer was discharging cargo into a cargo boat, but somehow there was a deficiency between the tally and the quantity that should have been actually in the boat, and a report was made to the Police. Inspector Grimes sent a Chinese Corporal of Police on board under the disguise of a servant, in order to detect the robbery. P. O. Hoong Anning observed this morning the defendant sampan alongside the cargo boat, and saw the 1st defendant take two bags of rice and put them into the sampan where the 2nd defendant was. The Policeman then informed the 2nd mate, Mr. Tulloch, of this, who went with him and found the rice, as also some small bundles of coir twine. The 1st defendant, the mother, was sent to three months' hard labour; the 2nd, the daughter, was sent to 14 days' hard labour.

A PICK-POCKET.

Wong Asam, a shop-employee, was charged with attempting to pick the pocket of a Chinaman and was sent to four months' hard labour, and to be exposed in the stocks for three times, one hour each time.

BURGLARY.

Leung Aloj, a boatman, was charged with being concerned in the burglary of the house of one Tin Ahol, No. 164, Queen's Road West. The case was remanded till the 27th.

MURDER.

Li Ashing, a cook unemployed, was charged by P. C. Pang Aloj with stealing a bangle from a European child. An Amah named Young A-tze stated that she was in the employ of Mr. Humby, of the Empire Tavern, and she took the child to a cook shop to make a purchase and a man snatched the bangle from the child's wrist. She returned and reported the matter to her employer, who communicated with the Police. Sergeant Pang Aloj was sent to make enquiries. He heard something and then went to a smoking divan in Taiping-shan, where he saw the defendant and taxed him with the robbery. He admitted at last that he did so, and gave up the bangle. The case was adjourned till the 27th inst.

CONDEMNED TO DEATH.

BY DARWIN C. PAYET.

His crime was desertion; his punishment death.

On the morning of March 10, 1865, it was apparent to the government forces stationed at and near City Point, Va., that an event of more than ordinary significance was about to transpire. Officers and ordnance hurried to and fro through the narrow streets and by-ways of the place made famous as Grant's base of supplies, while an occasional gun in the tell told all too plainly the dreadful story of civil conflict.

The members of the 11th Pennsylvania stationed near head-quarters, were sitting in their tents brightening their arms and accoutrements, or gathered in little knots in each company street were earnestly discussing the impending shooting.

Provost Marshal General Patrick, the Craft of the army of the Potomac, was here and there, like a bird on the wing, issuing orders and dispatching ordnance with a promptness that boded no good to the poor fellow whose life was to pay the forfeit of an injurious movement toward home and friends, technically called desertion.

At last, after hours of active preparation by the troops and unceasing meditation by the poor fellow in the guard house whose young life was about to be offered up, the column formed and filed away to the place of execution—distant from City Point about two miles, and directly in front of the camp of the 15th Regiment, N. Y. Volunteer Engineers. It seems as if nature had chosen right in setting apart this place for military executions. From the spot where the Peanut, a sheet six inches long and four in width, which was hatched by Alec, son of Assessor Badlam. The young man nursed the enterprise with varying success for a few weeks and then graciously permitted Fred, Lee, son of the Police Captain, to assume a part-proprietorship at a ruminously low price.

The youthful proprietors are under the immediate direction of the facetious Assessor, who dictates the editorials on political affairs and thus indirectly wields an immense influence among its patrons. The paper is devoted to the Washington Grammar School, whose public subscribe generally and liberally for its support. A department of the journal is devoted to arithmetic, and the beneficial results of its reading cannot be too greatly estimated. The youthful editor does not indulge in abstruse conjectures, but plies his readers with such mild and honest conundrums as the following:—

"If a wooden-legged horse runs a race with a lamp-post, how many onion skins will it take to cover the shadow of a match?"

"If it takes an Indian rubber elephant six weeks to hatch half a dozen four-eyed ducks out of seven east-iron water-melons, how many pints of silver-plated cobble-stones will it take to feed the same for six months?"

A column, in imitation of an older contemporary, is headed "Whoppers," and is laden with local quibbles of this character.

"That Jackson wanted to save his lunch for the next day. That Pike wears a paper shirt to school. That Harry McGee bought his hat on the installment plan. That Albert Williams sits on the fence to see feet go by."

The Peanut was constrained to issue a supplement on the day after the election to relieve the harrowing suspense of its readers, instead delaying the intelligence until the next regular issue of the paper. The young men have monopolized a small area of the Assessor's wood-shed as a printing establishment and press-room, and the youthful editor economizes time and paper by "setting up" his heavy articles directly from the tablets of his memory, and disregards the antiquated custom of editors in general of transferring their ideas to paper before being set up into type.

The Busy Bee, somewhat smaller in size than its contemporary, is edited by Arthur Wheeler and Eugene Lent. It is more dignified in tone, eschewing the vein of facetiousness which characterizes the article of the Peanut. The larger portion of the paper, since its inauguration, has been claimed by a serial story, bristling with startling occurrences, and calculated to impress the readers with a succession of fearful nightmares. This hero of the narrative is one "Slaughtering Jim," who emerges from the most perplexing situations of difficulties with which the author may be pleased to saddle him. The title page of the Busy Bee is garnished with a representation of a hive, and the verse commanding, "How doth the little busy bee..."

The Thunderbolt is of recent development, but has already made a decided mark in the field of juvenile journalism, by its bold and utterances fearless. Indeed, in the practical phraseology of a rival editor, some of the utterances are entirely too fearless, and calculated to "cut a patch over the writer's eye." The most recent issue of the Thunderbolt contained a representation of a man "behind the bars," labeled "The place where Billy Guard will be seen if he does not stop publishing libels on the Thunderbolt." The young man whose destination is thus pictured, reluctantly left the publisher of a rival paper, Busy Bee, into the realm of the unknown. Ready, aim, fire. The six fire as one man, and the condemned falls backward into his coffin, killed instantly, only his limbs visible from his knees down. The agony is over, and the man who defied military law, in order to see the faces of those he loved best on earth, has gone into the presence of his Supreme Commander to answer for the deeds done in the body. The troops re-form in solid column, and to the notes of a sprightly instrumental piece retrace their steps to camp.

Seated in my little study, I look at a picture over the mantel, of a smooth-faced soldier boy nineteen years old, in full uniform; and my mind almost unconsciously reverts to the scenes of nine years ago; the tollsome marches by night and day, the midnight alarm, the picturesque camp on the Appomattox, and the little tent not far from the James River, in which the picture was taken, while an occasional gun at "the front," told a strange story. Again the street of L Company is filled with the familiar faces; Blies and Downing, Tallcott and Wheeler and the rest of the boys are there; again the cheery voice of Squire Reeder is heard—"Company L fall in for mail," which causes a simultaneous throwing open of cabin doors and the promptly rallying about the old Squire for precious home missives. All is before me, and as I bring out recollection after recollection from the dusty alcoves of memory, I wonder where my former comrades have fled to. Some have sought homes beyond the Rocky Mountains; a few still linger among the places of their nativity, and the friends of earlier years; three or four have been mustered, we trust, into the Grand Army of our Lord and Master.

JUVENILE JOURNALISM.

(San Francisco Chronicle.)

The spirit of infant journalism has recently exhibited itself in this city in a contagious type, and it is possible that within a brief period each school will have its interested care for by a representative organ. The disease was noticeable in this city some time ago, but was suppressed in connection with a spirited controversy between two rabid journalists who extended their differences beyond the editorial sanctum, and were collied by a stalwart policeman one evening while engaged in flogging each other. The immediate cause of the quarrel was a charge of plagiarism, made against one who styled himself the "champion juvenile story writer of the Pacific Coast." The tale involved the merciless slaying of fourteen men, the destruction of an entire village and various kindred calamities, and was entitled "Fighting for Freedom, or the Fortunes of a Federal Fugitive." The charge was promptly refuted in the succeeding issue of The School Room, with the supplementary information that the accuser was a liar and a jail-bird. The judgment of the Police Magistrate was that the 11th Pennsylvania stationed near head-quarters, were sitting in their tents brightening their arms and accoutrements, or gathered in little knots in each company street were earnestly discussing the impending shooting.

Provost Marshal General Patrick, the Craft of the army of the Potomac, was here and there, like a bird on the wing, issuing orders and dispatching ordnance with a promptness that boded no good to the poor fellow whose life was to pay the forfeit of an injurious movement toward home and friends, technically called desertion.

At last, after hours of active preparation by the troops and unceasing meditation by the poor fellow in the guard house whose young life was about to be offered up, the column formed and filed away to the place of execution—distant from City Point about two miles, and directly in front of the camp of the 15th Regiment, N. The Thunderbolt is of recent development, but has already made a decided mark in the field of juvenile journalism, by its bold and utterances fearless. Indeed, in the practical phraseology of a rival editor, some of the utterances are entirely too fearless, and calculated to "cut a patch over the writer's eye."

The most recent issue of the Thunderbolt contained a representation of a man "behind the bars," labeled "The place where Billy Guard will be seen if he does not stop publishing libels on the Thunderbolt."

The young man whose destination is thus pictured, reluctantly left the publisher of a rival paper, Busy Bee, and is moment of the most inopportune manner, and winds up by becoming a physical wreck, a torment to herself, and a nuisance to her friends.

It is bad enough for a man to be ill,

but it is worse, far worse, for a woman.

People, probably, think just as well of a man who has been treated as a woman,

however, is disgraced, and many marry-men will hesitate before approaching her.

Besides, she has suffered in another way. She has been made to lose much val-able time, and her capacity to love has been greatly injured, if not destroyed,

she is the publisher of a rival paper,

which has been written to her by her husband, and is moment of the most in-opportune manner, and winds up by becoming a physical wreck, a torment to herself, and a nuisance to her friends.

to a pernicious "understanding." Those, who have the control of young women, ought to see that their charges are not needlessly victimised. It is not necessary to put girls under lock and key in order to protect them; and it would be absurd for a father to ask the intentions of every man who is introduced to his daughter. Young people must be allowed a little latitude, which they will mostly use properly. But, on the other hand, it is to tolerate the last degree foolish for parents even to tolerate "understandings" such as they now often do their best to encourage.

After a gallant has had ample opportunities of studying the character of a maiden, and plenty of time to make up his mind, he should either do the latter in a decisive and satisfactory manner or receive his dismissal.

We are aware that jilters often excuse their shabby conduct by alleging that what has been regarded as love has been nothing more than warm friendship
